MCINNES
COOPER

Renewable energy development has emerged as a leading global concern and driver of economic growth. As the world embraces this change, it brings both challenges and opportunities – along with complex legal issues.

McInnes Cooper's experience and insight helps clients grow and succeed in the renewable energy industry – pursuing new opportunities and expanding into new markets, while navigating regulatory environments and minimizing risks.

What a Renewable Energy Law Firm Can Do For You

McInnes Cooper has been advising leading clients in the energy and natural resources industry for generations. So it's only logical that we've also been at the forefront of renewable energy development.

Headquartered in one of the fastest growing renewable energy regions in North America, we provide legal advice to newcomers in the renewable energy market and to established companies seeking to take advantage of the growing opportunities in that market. We regularly work with all levels of government and regulatory bodies on industry-leading projects and legislative changes to enable innovative renewable energy programs. And we're continuously enhancing our services.

An Experienced and Knowledgeable Team

Our cross-disciplinary team has advised clients on all matters relating to the development, financing, construction and operation of their renewable energy projects. We have been counsel to leading developers of wind, biomass, tidal, hydro, solar and geothermal projects in Canada and the Caribbean. Our efforts are resourced and scalable to all project sizes.

We have been active in the Caribbean for over 20 years and have established relationships with many local counsel. Our collaborative approach, working with local counsel to leverage both our renewable energy expertise, and local counsel's jurisdictional expertise has been a powerful model for our clients looking to develop projects in the Caribbean.

With our experience in Public-Private Partnerships we can help governments and private industry design and execute innovative ways to develop infrastructure and energy projects.

As a renewable energy client of McInnes Cooper, count on us to be there with the expertise, innovation and solutions needed to help keep the wind at your back.
